Autodesk Inventor R11 Service pack 1 - Series+Professional (en/cz/de).The Montana Supreme Court on Tuesday overturned the conviction of a man who was sentenced to life in prison for firing the first shot into the "98-round" crowd of civilians when the Republic-By-The-People Van reenacted the end of "Dirty Harry's" showdown with the Iranian terrorist in the 1971 movie, "The Enforcer." The Montana court found that the state trial court in Lincoln County lacked sufficient evidence to sentence Jason R. Underwood for the attempted murder of an unknown number of victims under the one act one crime rule. Several witnesses reported hearing a gunshot in the crowd and concluded that the shot must have been fired by Underwood. Based on that evidence, Underwood was convicted of attempted deliberate homicide. But the Supreme Court wrote that the inference of Underwood's guilt "cannot be drawn beyond a reasonable doubt." "There is simply too great a difference between a single shot fired and an unknown number of shots fired," the court wrote. Underwood was caught by police with a .22 caliber rifle and a drum magazine of 20 rounds and was running from police when a victim, firing a semi-automatic rifle, ran into his path. He caught the victim in the shoulder with a shot, which went through his back, and he fled. "Although he could have shot the original victim in the original shootout, he did not. Instead, he fired a second shot at a second victim by happenstance," the Supreme Court said. "Underwood's actions provide no evidence of purposeful intent." The first shooting was captured by police video camera 3e33713323
